Prof B M. Johri made a lecture tour of several universities and research institutions in U. K Netherlands, West Germany, Poland, Switzerland and Hungary from July 3 to August 30, 1970 Dr. N. S Rangaswamy visited the Institute of Experimental Botany, Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences, Praha, for 3 months (from August 2 to November 2, 1970) under the Indo-Czech Cultural Exchange Programme He collaborated with Dr J Tupy, Department of Genetics, on studies in nucleic acids in the pistils of Nicotiana

Prof. B M. Johri attended the III conference of Asian Association of Biology Education at Manila, from December 27, 1970 to January 2, 1971. He delivered a lecture, 'Proper programming of Laboratory Exercises for Biology Education'. He also presided over the Botany section of the 58th session of the Indian Science Congress, held at Banglore from January 3, 1971 Dr. S L Tandon, Dr. G S Paliwal, Kumari Lalita Kakkar, Kumari Kanan Nanda, Kumari Sheela Verma, Shri Prithipal Singh and Shri Sudhir Chandra of this department attended the meeting and presented papers

BOTANICAL SOCIETY

About 200 delegates from all over India participated in the Golden Jubilee Session of the Indian Botanical Society held in the Department from December 24-26, 1970. The Society honoured Professor B. M. Johri with the coveted Birbal Sahni Medal for 1970. He delivered a lecture 'My Reminiscences : The education of an Embryologist'. The following two symposia were held (a) Modern Trends in Taxonomy and (b) Growth, Development and Differentiation.

The fourth series of the Panchanan Maheshwari Memorial Lectures were deliverd by Prof. D. D. Pant, Department of Botany, University of Allahabad from November 9 to 11, 1970.

The botanical excursions to lake areas in Alwar, Bharatpur, Wazirabad and Faridabad were well attended. A debate on 'Microorganisms have proved very fruitful in understanding biological processess' was arranged by the Society on February 6, 1971. The students took much interest in the Symposium on 'Pollution Biology' and discussed its implications on February 19, 1971. 'Perils of Modern Sciences', an on the spot essay competition attracted many competitors. The annual competitions in Plant and Stamp Collection and preparation of biological charts and models were held on 7th February, 1971.

Four number of volume 21 of the 'Botanica' a mimeographed quarterly journal of the Delhi University Botanical Society were issued during the year.

The journal Phytomorphology, official organ of the International Society of Plant Morphologists is now running in its 21st Volume.

CONVOCATION AND CITATIONS

CONVOCATIONS

The Forty Eighth Annual Convocation of the University was held on 27 February, 1971, at 3 00 P M in the New Convocation Hall (Arts Faculty Building)

Shri G S Pathak Chancellor of the University presided over the function and Professor T R Seshadri, F R S Professor Emeritus addressed the graduands

According to the decision of the Academic Council, candidates for the following degrees only were admitted to the respective degrees in person at the Convocation and the remaining degrees were conferred in absentia

Ph D	LL M
M Litt	M A
M Lib Science	M Sc.
M Com	M B A (Master of Business Administration)
M Ed	M D
M S	M Ch (Plastic Surgery)
M Nursing	M Sc (Civil Engineering) (Structures)

The degree certificates of the candidates admitted to various degrees in absentia were sent to the Colleges/Institutions concerned for distribution to the candidates in accordance with Academic Council decision taken in this regard

Out of 15,998 candidates eligible for admission to various degrees, 2223 (1188 Men Graduands plus 1035 Women Graduands) were admitted to the post graduate and higher degrees in person at the Convocation

SPECIAL CONVOCATION

In addition to the above a special Convocation was held on 25 January, 1971, in Swami Vivekananda Hall of the Delhi School of Economics for conferment of the degree of Doctor of Laws (LL D) honoris causa on His Excellency Dr Clarence Wilfred Janks, Director General, International Labour Organisation, Geneva

The citations read out on the occasions are given hereinafter.

CONVOCATION ADDRESS

Delivered by

Professor T. R. Seshadri,

F. R. S. Professor—Emeritus

on 27 February, 1971

I value the great privilege of sharing with you all the enjoyment of this annual festival of great significance and importance. I heartily congratulate the new graduates who have now the special honour of belonging to a great and progressive university that stands for high academic values and traditions and is set for playing a leading role in the educational developments of our great country. It is now nearly 50 years ago that I attended my first convocation as a new graduate and there I was told that I had become a V. I. P. and consequently had responsibilities and duties. More of these occasions were repeated as postgraduate degrees were received. As I opted to be a teacher I have attended numerous convocations pertaining to the graduation of my students. Even this year I have the pleasure of seeing a number of them participating in this festival. Occasionally some people belittle these celebrations and ceremonies. I am sure that it is a mistake to do so. They have their rightful place in education since they serve as health giving tonics to the minds of young men and women and serve to elevate them. They have the sanction of long experience and evolution. Not only in schools and colleges of all ages, but even in other avenues of human endeavour the ceremony of graduation, called by various names has been important. The rationale is that the graduate has come into possession of power and skill which he should use properly for his own progress and for the good of the world. The two are fully interrelated and are complementary. The first without the second is of no significance and the concept of the good of the world encompasses that of the individual also.

Aim of education :

I mentioned that these celebrations form part of the educational process. The question may therefore be raised as to what is the essential purpose of education. There have been many definitions, possibly to suit different circumstances. In Europe it used to be stated that it is for making good citizens ; more recently it has been expected to produce skilled men and women ; considerable emphasis has therefore been laid on technology. An ancient Sanskrit saying in our country states that education produces culture. More recently great Swami Vivekananda declared that 'Education is the manifestation of the perfection already in man'. This definition is of great significance. In the evolution of modern education in science this is the attitude that has been accepted, that students should be trained to think and use their inherent capabilities fully. Further it has been recognised that education really begins at the birth of a baby and continues all through later life. According to Indian thought and philosophy it does not end at death since death is only a stage in the Individual's progress A helpless all-dependent baby [illegible] live in harmony with his environment

Laws of life and living :

The obvious aim of education is to ensure happy and meaningful life. Frequently there has been misunderstanding and mis statement about the objectives of life prescribed by Indian tradition, philosophy and religion We are reported to be otherwordly and to neglect this world and this life I do not know how this misunderstanding arose But our sacred books (scriptures) and our philosophers have fully emphasised the importance of this life and of living happily in this world This subject has been fully discussed in a recent book entitled 'The Message of the Upanishads' by Swami Ranganathananda who is internationally reputed for his spiritual knowledge and clear exposition For example, the Isa Upanishad, one of the earliest in history recognised these objectives fully Having done so, the main problem was how to accomplish them effectively What is the right way to go about them ? The wrong way will lead to trouble and end in failure Here comes the need for correct strategy We have heared of masterly strategies of great generals like Napolean in the battle field or war area They led to great success Scientists talk of strategy of scientific research Those who have lived good life know how difficult it is and what great need there is for correct strategy For this purpose the necessary knowledge becomes a primary essential, knowledge not so much of the details, but of the principles involved, knowledge of the secrets knowing which all else becomes known As a typical example in physical science I may mention the law of Gravitation People knew from very early days in history that apples fall and more dangerously cocoanuts fall from the tall trees, but it is only after Newton discovered the 'Law of Gravitation' that we have been able to use this natural force satisfactorily Similar is our knowledge of the Laws of Chemical combination and decomposition The Periodic Law was discovered by Mendeleyev just over a century ago and ever since it has continued to be the basis not only for the progress of Chemistry but also for the development of many areas of Technology Therefore it is necessary to know the law or laws governing the phenomena of life for working out our strategy The physical laws do not suffice because they are limited and relate only to matter and are incomplete A little thinking and education tell us that we are not the body only and that we are more than the material Each one of us has a mind and it is very powerful and the mental world is much bigger and more complicated than the physical and it is more subtle Those who have critically examined the human organism find that there is something more deep in the person which usually claims the mind and body as his or hers That is more permanent spiritual part Unless we know all of them namely physical, mental and spiritual our knowledge of life is incomplete and our strategy imperfect

The Law of Renunciation :

Before we can enjoy this world, we have to learn the necessary technique of enjoyment. Many discoveries have been made in this field in our country, continually verified and applied. They have been summed up in one significant word 'renunciation'. It involves giving up ; the question arises giving up what ? In essence it is giving up smaller things for the greater. Children, as they grow, give up dolls for books. Later physical pleasures like eating are superseded by the mental and spiritual Adults enjoy literature and art and philosophy. The natural course of renunciation leads to progress towards the highest goal. It is easy to appreciate that if going east is good, the west has to be left behind. Renunciation is therefore a key maxim and there is no true enjoyment unless renunciation is involved. It eventually turns out to be giving up slavery and gaining mastery, and important strategy indeed.

Outlook on life :

Two basic ideas which together sum up Indian philosophical and spiritual outlook on life are as follows : (1) Live a full span of life, reported to be hundred in ancient days and could be much longer now. (2) Work with zest and joy and with deep interest in life and its affairs. But these have to be achieved with correct knowledge. Longevity should not mean prolongation of human suffering, but mean prolongation of human enjoyment. In this connection the question has been asked, 'Is it wrong to own wealth ?'. The answer is 'No, but wealth should be owned by us and used correctly.' It is dangerous if it should own us and we become its slaves.

As besetting human life and human happiness four serious troubles have been mentioned : (1) Hunger has been the most serious and wide spread. Science and technology have solved this problem for advanced countries and they hold out promise of doing so for advancing countries also provided other factors do not intervene. (2) Disease comes next as seriously affecting life and longevity. A great deal has been done by medical science to remove this suffering and also to increase the span of life. However there is need for continued vigilance. For exapmple sometime back the claim was made that malaria and mosquitoes had been exterminated. Currently there is recrudescence of mosquitoe menace with renewed vigour and we have not yet taken necessary action. (3) Grief that is specially related to the mind cannot be solved by physical science. The more advanced a society is in material wealth and social welfare the more unhappy it becomes. Only the pattern changes and the form is different, becoming more and more subtle and consquently more and more unbearable. Bodily disease is more easily cured ; the mental is far more difficult Very early in this century Swami Vivekananda warned the Western world that this would happen so long as man remains ignorant of his real nature, of his real needs and of the correct methods. We now hear that in affluent countries mental diseases have assumed alarming proportions. (4) Old age partakes of both the physical and mental ailments. Regarding the former much has been done to provide relief and many scientists are engaged in this task. But the latter is like grief and can be met only by proper religious philosophy and spiritual development Provided with these supports old age has its own graces and can be lived joyously and meaningfully , by virtue of its large experience, s ch enlightened old age can p ay an important part for the welfare of society

Man-making Education

It has been the common practice of leaders to seek the remedy of social and national problems in the education of the young Because the right type of education will ensure the right attitude of mind and lead to right conduct Swami Vivakananda has emphasised the essential secret that it should be man making , other desirable features follow if this criterion is assured. It will then enable our growing citizen to take up effectively all challenges of scientific, industrial, social and political problems and solve them and not shelve them

Most of our present education at home, school, college and university aims at building our body and to some extent our mind We know a great deal about our body and are able to apply scientific methods for its up keep Our standard of health and life has thus gone up But we know comparatively little of the science of the mind But by experience we have developed the use of some efficient m thods of training it enabling us to have better memory and to think and solve problems We also realise that mental concentration is important All successful men and women have developed the mind mostly unconsciously Our academic courses make it keen, but do not make it strong strength is also quite necessary This strength has to be built on an efficient base of rational ethics and strict discipline There is an ancient scientific system in our country called Raja Yoga This deals with the training and disciplining of the mind as a powerful instrument which eventually is capable of understanding the ultimate truth and reality of existence Other yogas adopt other methods But the essential foundations are (1) ethics called 'Yama' in the language of Yoga and (2) descipline of body and mind called 'Niyama' The former embodies the well known principles of non killing, truthfulness, non stealing, continen e and non-receiving of gifts, and the latter emphasises, cleanliness, contentment, austerity, study and self surrender to God Without being well established in 'Yama' and 'Niyama', progress of the mind becomes unsatisfactory , it will lack strength and power Unfortunately in modern education this aspect is lost sight of , much of the finance and time we spend are not fully effective because of the lack of emphasis on these two fundamentals

A basic discovery made long ago in our country was that we are in essence spiritual, 'atman' being the essential part, and the body and mind being its instruments The Upanishads called us children of immortality and bliss , would not the realisation of this be a worthwhile objective of education ? Then the world will be for us all happiness and no sorrow Indian leaders of thought have repeatedly emphasised that this will not mean giving up the world and all good work for the maintenance and progress of the community. It will mean the opposite

The workers will be more efficient and the work will be better done and the community will be more happy all round. This has been brought out in a very homely way by our most recent great saint and avatar Sri Ramakrishna Paramahamsa. He emphasised that the life in the world is full of dangers. In order to indicate a simple but effective method of protection he gave the analogy of cutting the jack fruit. If we cut the jack fruit and directly handle it, the gum sticks, the hands get messy and the work becomes impossible. But smearing the hand with a little vegetable oil removes the difficulty ; the gum does not stick and we can freely open the fruit and the work becomes enjoyable. Similar is the situation in life. It is a sticky mess and full of dangers if we enter it without necessary preparation. A little oil of spiritual training in early life, a little foundation in ethics and self discipline, will enable the youthful entrants to face the dangers and come out successful. Historians tell us that in our country the most prosperous and happy periods followed spiritual revolutions which led to the establishment of Dharma or correct code of conduct. Asoka's empire was one such and consequently we use his emblem as national symbol.

There is great advantage in having the above knowledge of life and applying it. Then the players in the game of life will play it well and enjoy it. They will observe the rules of the game and not resent it and violate it. What will be the standard of tennis and what will be the pleasure in playing it if we do not have the rules of the game and the court with its markings and the net ? These regulate the fine features in the game and make it enjoyable. So are the laws and regulations of the society, of the nation and of life for making them meaningful and for enriching them.

Living in the World :

Not having the correct knowledge and therefore not enjoying life in the right way, one is considered to be committing suicide. Living in the world is not the same thing as being worldly. Bhagawan Sri Ramakrishna, the supreme master of the strategy of life, has expressed the position in a telling way. It is right that we live in the world, but worldliness should not live in us. A boat should be on the water and this is normal ; but water should not be in the boat as this will spell danger. It is the worldly minded that has fear of this world, and is seriously disturbed by heat and cold, joys and sorrows, gains and losses, victory and defeat. The man of correct knowledge takes all these as opportunities for development. He has the spirit of freedom, fearlessness, love and service. We have seen all these exemplified in the life of Mahatma Gandhi.

You may wonder why one like me who has been a scientist all my life and may most probably continue to be one in future lives also should not have utilised this important occasion for speaking to you about science, for example chemical science and its numerous attractive features. I wish to explain that I have a definite purpose. I have the feeling that science itself is getting into danger Science of high quality demands unstinting devotion, dedication, concentration and renunciation. Being the product of supreme mental effort it needs not only a keen mind but also a strong mind which is capable of sustained effort We seem to be rapidly losing hold of the essential virtues Without them there is also the great danger of science getting into wrong hands and placing human society in danger.

Science and Technology Revolution :

We all know and realise that we are living in a period of great revolution, this is called science and technology revolution We have had earlier many other revolutions, political and cultural and last century we had the industrial revolution In the present technological age many thrilling achievements have been made, they are marvellous wonders Every aspect of our life is getting controlled by technology. The culinary art and the time honoured art of agriculture have been turned into food technology and agricultural technology respectively. The cook and the farmer have become technologists using a pressure plant or a tractor. Thereby our physical powers have been amplified thousand fold Education is also becoming educational technology and there is promise that education will become more simple, more quick and more pleasant and our mental and intellectual powers will also be amplified in a similar manner

Failure of Partial Strategy :

Earlier in this century all these technologies were hailed as promising plenty for the poor and health for the sick and happiness for every body However this has not been achieved After experiencing two disastrous world wars and the many lesser ones that have been continually plaguing us and the general feeling of uncertainty that has been prevailing, there is now severe disappointment Something has gone wrong with the strategy The technologists have been counting only on the physical capabilities of human beings, more recently those in charge of management have realised the existence of the mental aspect and apply social science also But they have totally neglected the spiritual part of man and the strategy has failed Possibly a great deal of the student revolt is a consequence and for those who have eyes to see this is so clear Our country has still the tradition of treating student life as sacred and as a period of austerity and discipline However, adverse influences are gaining strength and they lay emphasis on pleasure, greed and sex There are some and their number seems to be increasing, who consider that austerity and discipline are not suited to modern students They advocate self expression and oppose self control which is styled as inhibition Wild animals are stated to live a free life without inhibition and are considered to be healthier and happier Whatever may be the real situation in the wilderness, human beings should not be equated with wild animals All this uncontrolled talk and writing unsettle the minds of young students and they are not able to make the best use of school and university years Numerous cases of mental conflicts and insanity of various grades are produced.

The Right Path :

Life is a journey towards fulfilment and the achievement will depend on the path one takes The path of profit and pleasure is the easier, but it can never lead to true fulfilment though it may involve much activity capable of yielding some sense satisfaction. It frequently tends only to increase tension, sorrow and fear. The path of knowledge and illumination. the path of duty and responsibility and self-sacrifice, offers on the other hand the supreme opportunity to man. With the help of the twin guides of discrimination and dispassion it can lead to fulfilment in character and vision and to creativity and success.

In the study and application of the science of matter (physical science) there has been steady and very rapid progress. The present generation stands on the shoulders of its predecessors and sees farther and fuller. All earlier discoveries and inventions in physical and natural sciences are fully used. However, in the science of life, during recent years there has been a tendency to deny ourselves this advantage, the stored legacy of the past, and even the existence of the science of life. So engrossed are we with the thundering successes in the field of matter, that even at our peril we tend to neglect the deeper, subtler and more important science of life.

In conclusion let me recapitulate and reemphasise the value of the supremely positive approach made in our country regarding the achievement of good life and happiness in this world which I wish to all of you in full measure I have already mentioned the importance we place on the human body. The rare privilege of having human birth is highly praised in our literature Its uniqueness lies in its double capacity namely (1) study and control of the outer world, also called the world of fact and (2) study and control of the inner world which deals with meaning and value. Modern science has made great achievements in the former and as a consequence has raised our urgent need for the latter. In our country the path is well known and well established and is ready for us to follow. I earnestly pray that all of us shall use this legacy fully and efficiently and assure ourselves good and happy life full of meaning and value.

SPECIAL CONVOCATION

25 January 1971

Citation of Professor Sarup Singh, Vice Chancellor at the time of presenting Dr Clarence Wilfred Jenks, Director-General, International Labour Organisation, Geneva to the Chancellor for conferring on him The Honorary Degree of Laws (LL D.)

I present to you Clarence Wilfren Jenks, the distinguished Director-General of the International Labour Organisation

Clarence Wilfred Jenks is a renowned jurist and legal philosopher, an authority on international law and organisations, and the author of numerous outstanding works on the world legal order

Clarence Wilfred Jenks has served the ILO for four out of the five decades of its existence and is in a real sense its architect After a brilliant academic career at Cambridge where he took a double first in History and Law, he joined this organisation at the age of 22 He was appointed its Director General last June for a term of five years

Clarence Wilfred Jenks has played a key role at every important stage in the development of the ILO, including the post war revision of the Organisation's constitution and the negotiation of the Agreement whereby the ILO became a specialised agency of the United Nations For many years he has had the primary responsibility for the ILO's work in relation to international labour standards He has also been deeply involved in the development of the ILO's regional activities in Asia, Africa and Latin America and in the execution of all the major operational programmes of the ILO He has had, for many years, the general responsibility for the dev·lopment of the work of the ILO relating to the protection of human rights, including the abolition of forced labour, the elimination of discrimination in respect of employment, and the protection of freedom of association He personally conceived and edited the International Labour Code, which has now received 3,600 ratifications by 120 States To him goes a large part of the credit for the growth and development of the ILO into a World wide organisation

Clarence Wilfred Jenks is an international citizen in the best sense of the term and has served mankind without distinction of race and nationality. He is also one of those rare persons who has combined far reaching practical activity with a searching scholarly examination of the theoretical problems involved in that activity. He is widely honoured as a leader of progressive thought in international law He has dedicated his life and work to the proposition that a "Common Law of Mankind," to borrow his own famous phrase, is the urgent challenge faced by responsible leaders of the nation states of the world. The hopes of mankind, and perhaps the chances of its very survival, lie in the evolution and acceptance of such a common law of mankind. In his well-known work of that title, Jenks conceives of international law as the universal law as a projected world community, at present passing through an early stage of development. He calls for a "positive programme of bold but practical action" undertaken with faith and creative vision to achieve such a universal law, and enjoins the intelligentsia of the world to shoulder the responsibility for creating the necessary intellectual climate for the success of such a programme.

Clarence Wilfred Jenks started taking a keen interest in Indian affairs even before he joined the I.L.O. forty-five years ago. As early as 1933, in collaboration with others, he wrote on the "International Aspect of the Indian Constitution."

It is of great interest to us in India that his first major assignment in the ILO was the preparation of briefs for use at the Indian Round Table Conference designed to ensure for the Legislature and the Government of India adequate powers and authority for a full participation in the development and implementation of international labour legislation. These were widely used by the Indian members of the Round Table Conference, and were instrumental, ultimately, in ensuring for the Union Government under the Constitution of India a broad and uninhibited authority in respect of labour and its problems.

Clarence Wilfred Jenks's present visit to this country—his fifth since India became independent—gives our University the opportunity of honouring a great and distinguished international lawyer and civil servant, and a crusader for a stable and just world order. In honouring him, we honour ourselves.

Sir, I pray that you may be pleased to confer upon Clarence Wilfred Jenks the degree of Doctor of Laws (LL.D.) honoris causa.

SPECIAL CONVOCATION

25 January, 1971

Address by C Wilfred Jenks, Director-General of the International Labour Office, at the Special Convocation of the University of Delhi held to confer upon him the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws 25 January, 1971

I am deeply moved by, and will cherish and treasure for all my days, the honour which you have conferred upon me this morning

This is for me a memorable moment of retrospect and rededication My faith in the culture and freedom of India goes back to boyhood My personal bonds with my contemporaries in your intellectual life have remained unbroken since undergraduate days My professional concern with the place of India in the world community and her role in the progress of social policy has been continuous for forty years I am proud to have played my part in the first international conference held in independent India My recollections of my personal meetings with Rabindranath Tagore, Mahatma Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru are among the most vivid of a lifetime of vivid recollections of the outstanding world figures of the last half-century, a continuing source of inspiration in the quest to make a reality of one world of freedom, the freedom of mankind in a world which is one and the unity of all mankind in freedom My faith in the future of India, and in the importance of India's contribution to the creation of one world of freedom, an organised world community in which the rights of each and all are guaranteed and made effective by the common law of mankind, remains undimmed by the perplexities and disappointments, not free from mistakes and failures, inseparable from any of the great undertakings of history.

My copy of Gitanjali bears the date in my mother's hand of Christmas 1927 ; stirred by my friend Chief Justice Ananthanarayanan's reading of it at my fireside during our first term at Cambridge, I had asked for it for Christmas

That the mind should be without fear.

That knowledge should be free

That the world should not be broken into fragments by narrow domestic walls.

These fundamentals of the conviction that the freedom of the human spirit should no longer be the rare privilege of a chosen few but the common heritage of all were my faith in youth , they remain my faith today.

This is the vision which has sustained me throughout the years. It sustains today my unshaken belief in the achievement, not perhaps in our time but on a foundation which must be laid in our time, of one world of freedom, an organised world community in which personal freedom and social justice are the birthright of all mankind.

I am particularly proud to be counted among the honorary graduates of the university of the capital of India, the academic focus of your national unity, because your proclaimed national purpose is a clear expression of this vision. In the first moment of your national freedom the members of the Indian Constituent Assembly took together on 15 August 1947 a solemn pledge to dedicate themselves in all humility "to the service of India and her people to the end that this ancient land attain her rightful place in the world and make her full and willing contribution to the promotion of world peace and the welfare of all mankind." Tomorrow you will celebrate here in Delhi the twenty-first anniversary of the subsequent proclamation of the Republic. Upon the continuing vitality of that inaugural pledge of your nationhood, on its remaining the shaping spirit of your national life and your international policy, on the faith, courage, vigilance and magnanimity which successive generations bring to the fulfilment of that pledge, depends much of the future of mankind.

May I venture to say something of the continuing significance of that pledge not only for you in India but for all of us throughout the world? You will, I know, allow and indeed expect me to use the hospitality of academic freedom to speak on the matter with the directness which the gravity of the time requires, rather than with the inhibited circumlocutions of tactful diplomacy.

Half a century ago many of us, including an India then making her first appearance on the modern world stage, set our hands to the most difficult political task of all time, the creation of an organised world community designed to achieve international peace and security. We failed.

A quarter of a century ago we resumed the task with a broader vision and a more vigorous determination. How do matters now stand, and what is India's part in the great adventure? Are we succeeding or failing?

The answers remain wholly uncertain, and in their uncertainty lies the gravity of man's present predicament.

I will not belittle the economic elements in the problem which weigh so heavily upon us all. Poverty, population, production, pollution: these are, without question, among the crucial problems of the century to come, but all of them are soluble if we have the political will to solve them. Have we the political will to solve them? Are we ready for the far-reaching transformation of the whole climate of world politics and the whole structure of world organisation necessary to give effective expression to the will to solve them? What priority do we give, in political thought and action, to the creation of an organised world community and to our own part in its creation? How do we hope to reconcile the universality of the world community with the ideals it is designed to embody and serve? What place has the law in the fulfilment of these ideals?

Let us begin with two basic principles.

The unity of mankind is not an end in itself. All men are brothers, but there is little solace in the brotherhood of a common subjection to tyranny, fear, hunger, ignorance, disease or want. The brotherhood we seek is a brotherhood of personal freedom and social justice made possible by a stable peace, vigorous economic growth and respect for the rule of law. Economic development is only part of the answer. Material prosperity is no cure for moral inertia or spiritual atrophy. Freedom is of the spirit. Civil liberties and impartial judgment by due process of law are the fresh air and pure water without which man cannot live in freedom by bread alone.

Nor is law as such an end in itself. What part the law can play in this great adventure depends, as Chief Justice Gajendragadkar has so strikingly pointed out in his Lala Lajpat Rai Memorial Lectures on Law, Liberty and Social Justice, on how far it reflects the current momen- [illegible] as the only remaining avenue of change. To enlist the law in [illegible] orderly change [illegible] It involves developing the law from an inherited inhibition into the dynamic discipline whereby man fulfils himself in freedom. So to develop the law we must constantly renew its vitality from the fundamental values which shape the whole life of man in society. We must make the law the orderly but freely accepted discipline of a good life for all mankind.

Let us, surveying these issues from Delhi, widen progressively our range of vision from our immediate surroundings to the whole future of mankind.

India's place in the world community depends in the first instance on her unity.

Throuthout the ages the fundamental problem of every Indian statesman, the haunting riddle perplexing every student of India, has been, if I may quote Jawaharlal Nehru somewhat out of context, "whether it is possible to build a united and progressive nation out of the seemingly infinite diversity that makes up the fabric of Indian life". Nehru's own contribution to the unity and progress of India provides the elements which will enable the future to give an emphatically affirmative answer. The issue remains a crucial one. The perennial paradox of unity in diversity and diversity in unity which has created the richness of your culture has been a complex of elements the relative importance of which has varied at different stages of your history. In days gone by race, religion, language, social habit have all contributed their quotas to the tensions which have accompanied, and perhaps been the price of the richness of your diversity. In the present-day secular state with a constitutional mandate to promote equality of status and opportunity for all, these historical factors, while not yet wholly negligible, have become much less significant than the extent to which economic and social policy binds together those whom tradition and interest may tend to keep apart.

In this context, the momentum of unity comes largely from the more positive aspects of the impact of technological change. So it has been since the railways first began the transformation of the economic setting and social texture of Indian life, and so it is increasingly as the young India and the new India of today find their lives refashioned, in towns and villages alike, by the incessant impact of change. Change has usurped the role of sovereign lord and master of all our lives, but change is morally neutral; it is both preserver and destroyer; it may release the momentum of a new unity within and among nations or the chaos of disruptive violence. Where does the future lie? Does it lie in making change responsive to human values, and making law the instrument and discipline of orderly change, or does it lie in utter chaos in which the cult of the unknown because it is unknown plays havoc with moral restraint, "things fall apart", and "mere anarchy is loosed upon the world?"

To enlist the momentum of change in the service of human values is the outstanding task of contemporary social policy. The task has many facets. May I mention three? It involves a strategy of economic growth which lays the emphasis upon human fulfilment by the development of human resources to meet human needs, the strategy of jobs for the millions for which President Giri has made so impressive a plea and which is represented by the World Employment Programme of the International Labour Organisation, rather than a strategy of sophistication of technique, a strategy of reliance on the most advanced technology irrespective of its human consequences, and regardless of its impact on political stability, the balance of the economy, and social justice. It involves a strategy of social equality which ensures that the increased wealth created by increased production is translated into broader welfare, that an increased gross national product becomes a more equal enjoyment of higher standards of living for the community as a whole and not the addition of new inequalities to old. It involves a strategy of participation which ensures the active participation in development of the whole community and in particular of its productive forces, management and labour in all their varied forms. Where these strategies prevail and are successful, the momentum of change becomes the catalyst of national unity through social cohesion. Where these strategies are rejected or fail, the momentum of change becomes the fast breeder of disruptive chaos. Social policy thus becomes the decisive factor in high policy on the national scene and the world stage alike. Social Policy is now the crux of the national unity without which no nation can play a significant part in promoting the unity of mankind in an organised wor nity. The answer to Jawaharlal Nehru's question concerning of the unity of India lies in the future of her social policy, t coherence and national acceptability of her social policy will the vitality of her national unity, and the vitality of her natio will determine her impact on the world

I have been emboldened by the kindness and courtesy exter me on previous visits to India to dwell longer than a visitor shoul the national scene May I now attempt to situate it in the broader national perspective which is the only justification for my temeri discussing matters so fraught with difficulty

The unity of India is the keystone of a wider unity as vital for security, freedom and welfare of India as it is essential for the fulfilme of India s role in promoting the unity of Asia as her greatest contributio to the unity of all mankind The perennial paradox of the unity i diversity of India is written large over the whole of South-East Asia Geographically one, she has been bequeathed by history a tantalizing legacy of unifying traditions and divisive tensions The reforging in contemporary terms of a new social and economic unity of all the populous lands between the Hindu Kush and the Himalayas and the islands of the sea is one of the most immediate tasks of Asian statesman-ship and one of world importance Unity in the world at large cannot be built upon disunity among neighbours These are considerations infinitely larger than the divisive issues which tend to obscure them Economic co operation for development, an equitable sharing of the fruits of the new technology now increasingly available to the whole of the developing world, a common respect for human rights, and the vigorous pursuit of the common social objectives which are the funda-mental human purpose of development can do much to renew the old bonds of history and tradition with a new sense of common purpose, thereby helping to neutralize and even efface the tensions which destroy the forces of unity while preserving full respect for the principles of political independence and equal status In South East Asia, as in India, the prospects of unity will depend in substantial measure on the extent to which human need takes precedence of prestige and privilege Only in a united response to human need can we transcend the negative factors in the inheritance of history The influence and impact of each partner in that united response of the challenge of human need will depend upon the vitality of the response made possible by its own social policy

The unity of India is the keystone of the unity of South East Asia ; the unity of South East Asia is the keystone of the unity of Asia. Nowhere is the need for such a focus of unity comparable to the egional organisations of other continents more imperative Nowhere loes the challenge of good neighbourliness among cultures whose nteractions upon each other are reckoned not in centuries but in millenia sume such dramatic proportions as in Asia On the broader stage of ia as a whole, as in India and South East Asia, only a united response to human need can transcend the differences of ideology and interest which threaten with unspeakable disaster the homeland of half mankind. On this broader stage, the influence and impact of each partner will again depend on the vitality of the response to the common challenge of human need made possible by its own social policy.

The unity and progress of India is the keystone of the unity and progress of South-East Asia ; the unity and progress of South-East Asia is the keystone of the unity and progress of Asia ; the unity and progress of Asia is the keystone of the unity and progress of mankind. No unity of other continents, no union among them, can provide a sufficient nucleus for the unity of mankind while Asia remains so gravely divided and so much of Asia remains beyond the pale of our groping efforts to achieve an organised world community. Without a united Asia there can be no united world ; without an Asia united in freedom there can be no free world. In the world at large, as in each and all of its varied parts, only a united response to human need can create the momentum necessary to the creation by the United Nations of a united world. Only the human understanding made possible by a common approach to human problems can serve as an effective catalyst of political understanding in a world so tragically divided. On this, the largest stage of all, the influence and impact of each partner will again depend on the vitality of the response to the common challenge of human need made possible by its own social policy.

Such are the successive challenges which the unity of India, the unity of South-East Asia and the unity of Asia present for all who seek the unity of mankind ; there can be no comfort in the larger ideal unless we accept boldly the responsibilities of each successive stage in its realisation ; at each of the successive stages only a united response to the common challenge of human need can create the momentum of unity necessary to the fulfilment of the responsibilities without discharging which we cannot hope to lay a solid foundation for the next stage ; and at each and every stage the influence and impact of each partner will depend on the vitality of the response to the common challenge of human need made possible by its own social policy. Only by a united response to human need which transcends all differences of ideology and interest can we create a brotherhood of freedom which embraces all mankind.

I have spoken of high ideals and broad principles. May I add a few words concerning the relevance to these ideals and principles of the work of the International Labour Organisation.

We have sought and will continue to seek to make our modest contribution to the unity of India, the unity of South-East Asia, the unity of Asia, and the unity of all mankind ; to the constitutional and institutional structure of such unity at each stage of the long process of organic growth from the village to the world community ; to the dynamic policies necessary at each successive stage to breathe into the forms of unity the spirit which alone giveth life ; and to the dedication of each stage of an ever-broadening unity to the sanctity of human freedom None of this involves any new deparature for ILO, none of it involves any change of our constitutional structure or compromise of our principles All of it has been our firm purpose and set policy for many years

At each successive stage of the evolution of a larger unity, the ILO contribution has gone beyond seeking to develop the institutional structure of unity, its vitality has consisted of the relevance of ILO policies standards and technical co-operation to the substantive content of the larger unity which only a common concern for the common welfare can create

The accent throughout of our contribution has been upon enlarging human freedom, the freedom which the whole concept of an organised world community in which all men are brothers is designed to preserve and expand, a freedom in which freedom from forced labour, freedom from discrimination and freedom of association are the structural pillars of the larger freedom of equal opportunity and economic security

We must approach these issues in the unparalleled context of our own times

We are all conscious that we have today opportunities that man has never known before

We are no less conscious that we are failing to rise to the level of our opportunities

Peace among within nations, personal freedom guaranteed by the rule of law, economic growth, social justice, cultural vitality, science in the service of man, technology tempered by humanity these, as ideals, have become the common language, or perhaps it would be more prudent to say the common lingua franca, of our time, but in becoming the semblance of a common language they have not become a coherent philosophy or combined plan of action What we could do has not become the measure of what we do All too often aspiration becomes an affectation of attainment rather than a challenge to complacency or the discipline of determination, and we are apt to be satisfied with the scale of our objectives as a substitute for the solidity of our achievements The gap between promise and performance, between the Preamble to the Charter of the United Nations and everyday politics behind "narrow domestic walls", is the decisive dilemma of all who believe in one world of freedom, the freedom of all mankind in a world which is one and the unity of mankind in freedom

The burden of choice rests upon us all Unless we choose to be worthy of what we can be, we must be content to have been unworthy of what we might have been Idealists must be realists, but nothing is less realistic than contempt for ideals

May I conclude, as I began, with a profession of faith

I believe in the freedom of the human spirit.

I believe in the unity of mankind and the brotherhood of man.

I believe that these ideals are compatible with each other and complementary to each other ; I do not believe that either can be achieved at the expense of the other ; I believe in one world of freedom, the freedom of all mankind in a world which is one and the unity of mankind in freedom.

I believe that wisdom, faith, courage, vigilance and magnanimity are not to be discounted when the magnitude of immediate difficulties tempts us to despair ; that patience is neither the least nor the least effective of human virtues ; that reason and morality are the genetic code and central nervous system of the freedom of all mankind in a world which is one and the unity of mankind in freedom.

I believe that a vigorous social policy, within and among nations, realistic in its grasp of economic and technical limitations and competent in its execution but imaginative in its humanity and justice, has a decisive part to play in building the freedom of all mankind in a world which is one and the unity of mankind in freedom.

I believe that a vigorous response by the law to the momentum of society affords the only rational alternative to violence when the thrust of change constrains us to choose between the past and the future and that only if the law responds to this challenge can we achieve the freedom of all mankind in a world which is one and the unity of mankind in freedom.

I believe that, fortified by reason and morality, given new hope and spirit by a vigorous social policy, and preserved from oppression and violence by a vigorous response of the law to the momentum of society, mankind will survive and surmount the immense dangers which confront us by achieving in an organised world community the freedom of mankind in a world which is one and the unity in freedom of all mankind.

This is an impenitently robust faith. I remain unshaken in it after forty years of the vicissitudes of international life.

It is because we share these beliefs that I so greatly treasure the honour of being received among you today.

DEVELOPMENT PLANS

The Board of Post-Graduate Engineering Studies and Research of the All India Council for Technical Education has reviewed the working of the Post-Graduate Courses in Engineering and Technology sanctioned earlier and have also examined proposals for new courses While, doing so, the Board kept in view the financial resources available during the Fourth Plan period, and the assistance necessary to complete development on hand and introduce new courses.

The Central Government on recommendation of the Board has now approved the following courses to be introduced at this College. All the courses will be organised in a phased manner and according to facilities available and after taking into account the precise demand for advanced training in the subject field :

Civil Engg.—Two specialities @ (i) M.Sc. (Structure) Course (Already started)

* (ii) M.Sc. (Flood Control & Hyd. St)

Elect. Engg.—Two specialities * (i) M.Sc. (Inst. & Control)
(ii) M.Sc. (Communication system)

Mech. Engg.—Two Specialities * (i) M.Sc. (Head Power Engg.)
* (ii) M.Sc. (Production Engg.)

The Course marked at @ has since been introduced in 1966-67, and the courses marked at (*) proposed to be introduced in 1972-73, as some formalities like inspection of Lab./W. Shops etc. are yet to be completed by the University. Budget proposals for the year 1972-73 have since been submitted to the Delhi Administration for Government of India's approval.
